“ Our deepest sympathies to all who knew him. My Uncle Eddie was the sweetest and kindest man I have ever met. The funniest man, too. During Uncle Ed’s and Aunt Betty’s last visit to Michigan to stay with us, he drew hearts on every banana in the bunch in my kitchen, and then denied it, saying I must have bought them like that from the store. When we were driving in the car, he would wave at every Wal-Mart truck which passed by, saying he knew them. The trucks would honk back, too, and he would say, “I told you”. Six years ago, at the gatherings after my mother’s funeral, (his sister), he had everyone enthralled with his stories at the dinner table. Everyone wanted to sit at his table to listen to him. The stories my mother used to tell me about their childhood pranks showed me that he never lost his sense of humor and joy for life. And to see the wonderful and precious love he and Aunt Betty had for each other after these years was truly something to behold. My life has been enriched by him being my uncle. I wish I could be there with everyone, but my heart, love, and prayers go out to all of you. There is one more angel in Heaven.
