Her family was the center of her universe, and she devoted herself to them with a love that words could not describe.

As a skilled nurse, Georgia's talents in the medical field were nothing short of remarkable. Her dedication to her patients went beyond the call of duty, leaving a lasting impact on all those under her care. Her nursing skills were matched only by the immense love and empathy she showered upon her patients, providing comfort and solace during their times of need.

Beyond her professional life, she was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star. Georgia was vibrant and joyful. Her passion for music was infectious, and she could often be found singing and dancing to the rhythm of life. From the lively beats of her favorite tunes to the quiet melodies of cherished moments, she embraced the power of music to uplift and connect. Her love for life extended to the bingo and casino halls, where she enjoyed moments of excitement and laughter with her mother, creating memories that will be treasured forever.

Georgia had a special talent for finding joy in the little things and spreading smiles wherever she went. Her acts of kindness, both big and small, were a testament to her generous spirit. Whether through a thoughtful gesture or a heartwarming post, she had a unique ability to brighten the days of those around her.

As we mourn the loss of Georgia M. Basinger, let us also celebrate the incredible life she lived. May her memory inspire us to love more deeply, to dance with abandon, and to bring joy to the lives of others, just as she did. "I look in the mirror, but I don't see me.
Just the shell of what I used to be.
I miss the old me; I sometimes so want her back.
But I have to adjust to the me that's here; I know that's a fact.
Oh, but it's hard and such a slow process.
I have to handle this ordeal with a lot of finesse.
I know that this is just another test.
Pride and vanity are such great sins.
If one is not careful, they can be lost there within
I look in the mirror, but I don't see me.
If you are asking, "Oh, how can this be?"
The me that I saw before has changed in so many ways.
I had spent so much time in a daze.
I was on autopilot, merely trying to survive.
I had forgotten to celebrate and rejoice that I was alive.
I forgot to appreciate how hard I fought.
All that I overcame is a lot.
The trials and tribulations were treacherous and deep.
There are so many things of which I will never speak.
I look in the mirror, but I don't see me.
And maybe, just maybe, that's the way it's supposed to be.
For you see, when you overcome a battle, you could have easily lost.
Like a ship on the ocean that the sea has tossed
Like the lump of coal that becomes a flawless diamond
Like a painter's masterpiece, they have spent a lot of time on
Like the grain of sand in the oyster that transforms into a beautiful pearl

There is no way I could undergo such an endeavor and remain the same girl.
I look into the mirror, but I don't see me.
I see a woman who has an absolutely amazing and blessed destiny.
And that is quite alright by me.”
