“ It was 1989. We had a class spelling bee. We were all lined up on the wall against the chalkboards. I was nervous and I put my fingers in between the chalkboard and the wall and out came a letter that had been there for years. Ms. Aston brought over a ruler and searched in between the wall and the board. We found so many letters and sayings. So she thought it would be neat if we left our own letters and messages. She was always so fun.

Helen always called me baby sister! And I was her youngest sister. As we got older, when I would say this is your baby sister. Then she would laugh and she knew who was calling, I loved my big sister so much!
