“ Twenty two years ago during a December evening, I met Jesse at my sister, Mary's home in Roswell. Mary lived across the street from Jesse and Sally. Mary had just lost her husband. Returning home after the funeral, Mary realized her furnace stopped. Mary's first reaction was to call Jesse for help. Given Jesse's mechanical skills, he came over after work and repaired her furnace. Throughout the years Mary talked about Jesse as a good friend and neighbor such as when he drove her to Albuquerque for medical needs. Recently I talked many times to Jesse when Mary became gravely ill and passed away in July. Jesse shared his grief and also his thoughts of Mary. Those were his last thoughts spoken to me. Thank you, Jesse for being good to my sister.

“ Oh uncle Jesse, how you will be so missed by everybody. Your smile. The way you were. Your laughter was contagious and you laughed at everything funny. How you welcomed so many people. You'd give the shirt off your back to people in need. You were one of my best friends. And a person I can talk to without judgement. I will miss you so much.
