“ Sorry to read of John's passing. Our ranch bordered on the Nalda's near Corona and I knew the family well, having gone to school with Louie. John was known for some of his escapades, especially the time he kissed the typing teacher as she leaned over to check his work. She ran to the principals office and when Mr. Parker came upon the scene, John picked up his typewriter and tossed it out the window from the second floor after which he went home. That evening Mr. Parker drove out to the Nalda's ranch but was stopped at the gate by Big Mike. Afterwards John's new school was NMMI in Roswell.

We grew up together and have many wonderful memories of John, Mitch, and Louie as well as my Uncle Mike and my dear dad, Jean. It was wonderful to spend the day together every Thanksgiving.
