“ Jorge was my friend. One of the best friends i could've asked for. His contagious smile could turn all your dark days into the happiest day, his laugh was always something to cherish. He never failed at making you happy even if he was just sitting there talking crap. He was too good for this world. I pray that he has now found peace and he is safe. We could go months without speaking to each other but whenever we did see each other and speak again, it's like everything picked up where we left off. He was such an amazing person with the biggest heart. He loved talking crap to you, but when it came from him you know he was only joking. His smile could light up all the dark rooms, his laugh could bring color to the dull, his eyes could shine through the dark, his presence could bring comfort. Jorge was one of the strongest, most uplifting, outgoing people i've ever met. I really admired him as a person because he never let anything tear him down. He was a dependable person, you know if you ever needed anything from someone you could go to him and he will be there for you and do his best to make you feel whole again. He wasn't just a friend, but family.

“ Saying goodbye is one of the hardest things in our lives. Saying goodbye to a child is unspeakable. It is so deeply saddening and painful. Please know that you are not alone. We stand together with you in sadness, and stand together with you in pain. Sending prayers for peace and comfort. The Sun will shine again.
