“ Tomorrow it will be 14 years since the Lord called you home, far too soon for all of us left behind. I think of you often & remember what a wonderful young man you were, I often wonder what you would be like now, but I’m sure you would be doing great things with your life. I wish we wouldn’t have lived so many miles apart & could have spent more time together. I love to imagine you in heaven with grandma, I still can’t believe both of you left us in the same month, I don’t know how we lived through the pain of losing both of you. Our hearts still hurt, but by the grace of God we are able to carry on until we meet again. You will live on in our hearts & memories of you.

“ Sometimes I google your name just to see your face pop up. Then I laugh cause it looks like you're laughing at me. It's been a while since I last saw you but it feels like forever. Some crazy stuff has happened but I'm sure you know. I wish you were here and it gets hard especially around the holidays. We were not always the closest family but we spend this time together. I miss you so much and I wish all these kids running around could have known you like we did. You were so great and no one can replace you. I try to imagine you with your daughter and wish I could know her also, especially because I know you are in her. She is shy like you used to be. I've only seen her a few times but if i offer her candy or juice she likes me a little better. I love you.

“ I will always remember the fun we had at East Grand Plains, Mt View, and Roswell High. We had a blast playing football together. We always high fived each other in the halls and laughed over sharing jokes. I'm going to miss you Buddy. I have a ton of wonderful memories. This isn't goodbye but as we would say to each other, "Later."

“ I just want to first start by saying I so sorry for your loss. I just met Sean a month ago at work but we worked well together and got to know one another pretty good, he was so funny and joking and made me feel comfortable. He always has a smile and a great personality. He was always taking about his lil future "savanna". I just hope the family is doing good. God Bless you, I know I can't take the pain, but I do know he is in a safe and better place. May God Be with you!
